Enacting Agency: The Strategies of Women of Color in Computing

Apriel K. Hodari, Mia Ong, Lily T. Ko, and Janet M. Smith

Summary

Research on marginalized groups in STEM fields commonly overlooks those who persist and succeed, characterizing groups such a women of color as passive victims instead of active agents in their own achievements. Focusing on women of color who are successfully staying in STEM helps us focus on the ways they enact that strategy.

Read article.